The DNA of a Disciplemaking Movement

The following critical principles and values lie at the heart of our ministry philosophy:

1. Jesus is our Model
2. Disciplemaking is our Mission
3. Love is our Motive
4. Organic ministry is our Method
5. The Holy Spirit is our Means
6. Fruit is our Measure
7. The Gospel is our Message
8. The Church is our Medium
9. Youth are our Mandate
10. Relationships are our Momentum
11. Leading Servants is our Motto
12. Kingdom Obedience is our distinctive Mark

1. Jesus Is Our Model

It almost seems strange to argue for Jesus as our model for life and ministry. Doesn't everyone use Jesus as his or her model? Unfortunately, the answer to this question is NO. Everyone doesn't use Jesus as his or her model for life and ministry. While it is true that most everyone will talk about Jesus, quote from Jesus, teach what Jesus taught ... my experience is that too few make the character and priorities of Jesus their model for ministry.

Some people argue that Jesus should NOT be our model for ministry and that we should rather focus on the Story of God. Scripture never gives us this mandate - instead it tells us to walk as Jesus walked, to do what Jesus did, and to follow the pattern He modeled. We do, however, need to locate Jesus in the context of the story of God.

Other groups mistakenly argue that the church began in the book of Acts and therefore Jesus should not be used as our model. Paul or Peter or the epistles better explain how to do ministry. But Jesus planted the first church, commissioned His disciples to do what he did, and then sent them out to make disciples of all nations...following the pattern that He gave them. Paul understood this when he told his followers to "imitate me as I imitate Christ" (1 Corinthians 11:3). While Jesus' model is definitely pre-cross, the Holy Spirit was described by Jesus as "another Counselor"... of the exact same kind (John 14:16). The Holy Spirit would therefore be someone of the exact same kind who would be with them as Jesus was with His disciples... guiding them into all truth. Acts 2:42 demonstrates this consistency of pattern when stating that this healthy new church "continued steadfast in..." the priorities that had been modeled. The Holy Spirit would guide this new church body in walking as Jesus walked... in their context and culture.

Some believe that there are principles from Jesus that can be used in ministry and these principles are often cited and even a few verses from the life of Christ put behind them. Those with this position would not argue with using the life of Christ as our model, but they would never think of making Jesus their primary model for ministry.

Finally, some use the message of Jesus thinking that by doing this they are following the model of Jesus. But the message of Jesus minus the methods of Jesus does not reflect the true mandate of Jesus. Jesus was very clear, "do what I have done" (John 14:12), "walk as I have walked" (1 John 2:6), and follow the pattern I have given you (as seen in the 30 plus "just as" verses in the Gospels).

So while many have focused on the 'principles' of Jesus, or the 'message' of Jesus, most have failed to capture the full-orbed 'philosophy of ministry' that Jesus modeled and then commanded us to follow. Disciplemaking, flowing out of a deep love for God and a love for people, was not a great idea, or great suggestion, but the Great Command (Matthew 22 and 28). We are to do what Jesus did...extending this to all people groups, and then He would return (Matthew 24:14).

Using Jesus as our model of ministry demands a healthy exegesis of Jesus' complete life, His culture and context, and His calling. It also demands a fuller grasp of Jesus in all of Scriptures, as Jesus Himself understood that much was "written about me in the Law of Moses, the Prophets, and the Psalms" (Luke 24:44).

A critical part of understanding a proper use of Christ's life demands a clear grasp of His humanity. In His humanity, Jesus was man as God intended man to be. Wayne Grudem said it this way; "Jesus refused to rely on His divine nature to make obedience easier for Him." In other words, Jesus in His humanity became our model for ministry. He became what He was-not, so that we could become what we were-not. He modeled how to create a movement of multiplying disciples and then commanded us to do what He did the way He did it (obviously studying our context and culture). A proper understanding of both His 'personal calling' (dying for our sins), coupled with his 'ministry calling' (making disciples who could make disciples).... helps us grasp this implication. Unfortunately many have not understood the humanity of Jesus...and have knowingly or unknowingly concluded that we cannot do what Jesus did. Therefore why even try. Yet, He commanded us to do what He did...even telling us that we would do greater things than He has done! (John 14:12) Jesus in four years developed up to 120 disciples, 70 workers, and 11 leaders...by God's grace we may have up to forty years of making disciples...having the capacity of even making more disciples because of the greater amount of time available.... if we walk as He walked!

To adequately say that Jesus is our model for life and ministry means that we capture both the character and priorities of Jesus for life and ministry. This does not just mean a study of the Gospels... but a complete study of God's Word as it relates to Jesus' life and ministry that we are called to imitate. We must continually work to go deeper in His philosophy of ministry and the guiding principles He lived by. Anything less would be just quoting from His message or proof-texting a few verses from the Gospels to make us feel good about being like Jesus. Anything less than "doing what Jesus did" and the "way Jesus did it" is doing a disservice to the life and ministry of Jesus. It is not the real Jesus of the New Testament, as He didn't give us the option of just teaching His messages or proof-texting His life. He commands us today to follow Him... as He is still the Head of the Church and is very much alive! In commanding us to do what He did and to do it the way He did it... Jesus by His life modeled for us patterns and priorities to follow in building movements of multiplying disciples. As we practice these patterns and priorities ourselves, we must encourage the next generation to explore and practice the central spiritual practices of the Christian faith, such as: prayer, fasting, meditation, simplicity, solitude etc, (to name just a few). His Word and His life are not stagnant words and history... they are, and He is, "living, active, powerful and sharper than a two edged sword" (Heb 4:12). Anything less is not a full-orbed philosophy of ministry that is biblically rooted in the Life of Christ.

We must never grow weary of calling the next generation to "walk as Jesus walked"...no matter how "basic" or "demanding" this may feel at times...especially those of us who have spent years training in these basics. Remember the very first time you heard about the Life of Christ taught as a biblical philosophy of ministry. We must make sure that each new generation of young leaders has the chance to clearly grasp the Son's life. We cannot let these values get lost...or it can take several generations to recapture them.

2. Disciplemaking Is Our Mission

Step back into the first century for a moment, and place yourselves in the context of the initial followers of Jesus. First you have the book of James, and then possibly next you are given Galatians. But it is almost 20 years after Christ's death before you receive a summary of Christ's life in the Gospel of Matthew (A.D. 50). Once Matthew is written, it will be almost ten years before you have the gospel of Luke (A.D. 60), then almost 10 years later the Gospel of Mark (A.D. 68) and then finally...almost 20 years later, if you are still alive, you are given the Gospel of John (A.D. 85-90). Imagine what it would be like to be given a first-hand story of Jesus for the first time. Imagine reading that account and then coming towards the end of that Gospel... and reading what you have heard others say so often... "Go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to obey all that I have commanded you. And surely I am with you always, even to the ends of the age.”

Matthew captures these emotional last moments of Jesus with His disciples. Over the previous forty days, Jesus has appeared to His disciples ten times. Five of these appearances were in Jerusalem behind locked doors. Only one of these appearances was pre-announced. In Matthew 26:32 and 28:7 Jesus had told His disciples to go ahead and meet Him at Galilee “at the mountain”. Because of this announcement we believe that Matthew 28 was the first pre-announced appearance of Jesus where five hundred were gathered (1 Corinthians 15:6). There was excitement in the air and great anticipation. “When they saw Him they worshipped Him...” (Matthew 28:17). Jesus was clear that “all” authority had been given to Him, and they were to go to “all” nations...and He would be with them “always”. This Great Commission was “all-inclusive”.

We believe that Matthew 28 is a summary of Jesus life. One more time, at the end of His life...so that they would never forget it...He told them to do what He had been doing. “Go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you”. The central command is clear...to make disciples. The three participial phrases... going, baptizing, and teaching to obey tell us how to fulfill the command. In these sixty-two English words, Jesus simply reminds them what His life was about, and then commands His disciples to do what He had done... make disciples who can make disciples. This they understood. They had seen Jesus do this. They were recipients of this focused mission. He now extends that mission to them and with the second imperative in this Great Commission (Matthew 28:20... the Greek word “idou”, translated “behold or surely”) He tells us to keep our focus on Him as we seek to obey His command of “making disciples”, promising to be with us always, even to the very “end of the age”.

This Great Commission clearly frames up our mission. The central command of the Great Commission is to “make disciples” (matheteusate...aorist imperative active). It literally means to make disciples...who can make disciples...and to extend this to all nations.

Disciplemaking is different than discipleship. Jesus did not command us to do discipleship...He commanded us to make disciples. There is a major difference. Discipleship historically is the grounding of new believers in their faith. Disciplemaking involves discipleship, but it is more. Disciplemaking involves “going...baptizing...and teaching to obey”. In other words it demands the winning of the lost, the building of the believer, and the equipping of the worker... resulting in the multiplication of leaders to all people groups. This is “full orbbed disciplemaking”.

Disciplemaking is not just investing in the committed few. It is more than just equipping. It is the full-orbed process of going... baptizing... and teaching to obey.

Disciplemaking is not just evangelism. Evangelism is the going...the winning of the lost to faith in Christ. While important, evangelism is just the first step of disciplemaking.

Disciplemaking is the whole process of developing fully trained reproducing disciples. It recognizes that people are at different stages of growth and development and ministers to them at their present stage...always challenging them forward but giving them grace to grow at their own pace.

Seekers have different questions and need different activities than believers. Believers have different needs than seekers, and workers are also facing very different needs. Jesus recognized these natural levels of growth and maturity, and designed His ministry appropriately. Disciplemaking involves meeting the needs of people at various stages of growth and development.

While we may debate many of Jesus’ methods, we never need to debate our mission. He clearly gave it to us...after modeling it for us. The key to understanding how to fulfill the Great Commission is found in a biblical understanding of the Life of Christ. His life modeled how to do the Great Commission. That is why, without a good Christology, you will never have a good ecclesiology. Jesus is still the head of the Church, and we are still His body. He has told us to do what He did. His life was about creating a movement of multiplying disciples and we are commanded to fulfill that same mission.

3. Love Is Our Motive

Imagine the scene. It's near the end of Jesus' ministry. The Pharisees just tried to trap Jesus, but He escaped their grasp (Matthew 22:15). The Sadducees also questioned Jesus, who silenced them with His response: "You are in error because you do not know the Scriptures or the power of God" (Matthew 22:29). Next the Pharisees found an expert of the Law to test Jesus. The expert's question surely provoked the curiosity of the crowd and most probably the disciples curiosity too: "Of all the commandments, which is the most important?"

"The most important one," answered Jesus, "is this: Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one. Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength.' The second is this: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' There is no commandment greater than these" (Mark 12:28-31).

Imagine the amazement of the crowds, and even perhaps the disciples, when Jesus said, "the most important one is this...there is no commandment greater than these!" In a complex and demanding world, what beautiful simplicity Jesus offers. Love God and love people.

While the Great Commission addresses our mission, the Great Commandment (loving God...loving people) addresses our motive. If we get our mission right, but don't have the right motive...we will only be like clanging symbols.

Without love we are like clanging symbols. Love never fails. Love never gives up. Love is patient and kind. Jesus showed us how to love and then commanded us to "love one another just as He loved us" (John 13:34). For this is how everyone will know that you are my disciples, Jesus said (John 13:35).

Unfortunately or fortunately (based upon your perspective), in the crisis of our post-modern dilemma, love is the only answer left. Moderns have given the answers in terms of doctrines and theories, but these have come across as stiff and unrealistic.... and post moderns have rejected these answers as formulaic. The answer for breaking through and constructing the post-postmodern world lies... more so than ever... in the love of God embodied in people truly loving one another.

In my experience, this is a truth we will never fully master...nor will we ever fully miss it. Yet this is a principle we must keep at the forefront. Always training it...always teaching it...always living it...always growing in our capacity to bear this type of fruit. For the primary fruit of the Spirit is love (Galatians 5:22). By the very nature of love...this principle demands that ministry remains relational, not programmatic or curriculum driven. All life change happens through loving relationships, both a tough confrontive love and a tender merciful love.

4. Organic Ministry Is Our Method

The genius of Christ's ministry model is that He lived out His ministry in sync with organic processes He established as the creator of the universe. Jesus knew that there was a natural way to reap a harvest, and there were processes that could not be avoided in bearing lasting fruit.

On a ministry level, He laid a foundation by cultivating the soil of relationships. He then invested in a few by planting deep seeds of truth and finally reaped the harvest by mobilizing for expanded outreach. After a period of prayer he then appointed growing multipliers so that He could spend more time with them. After training, they were released to repeat the process throughout Jerusalem, Judea, and Samaria (Acts 1:8). These disciples in turn developed other proven multipliers who could repeat the process in new fields of ministry (Acts 6). The movement Jesus created followed a very natural process of organic multiplication which in four and one-half years "filled Jerusalem" (Acts 5:28), and within twenty some years it was said that "all over the world this gospel is bearing fruit" (Colossians 1:5-6).

On a personal outreach level, Jesus also acknowledged a God given process of coming to faith. By working a process of cultivating, planting and then reaping (cultivating friendships with the lost, planting the seeds of truth in their lives, and then calling for repentance and reaping the harvest), Jesus modeled a process of winning of the lost (Luke 15:1-2, John 4:34-38, Isaiah 28:23-29)

When followers came to faith, the scriptures speak of being "rooted and established" in Christ just as we came to Christ (Col 2:6-7)... an organic process. In time, Jesus involved His followers in a series of at least five ministry experiences over a two-year period, giving them ample opportunity to be equipped in ministry (John 4, Mark 1, Matthew 10, Luke 9, Luke 10)... causing a movement of multiplying disciples. Commissioning a few proven multipliers to oversee the process, Jesus left His disciples with another counselor who would keep guiding them through the process (John 14:26). The natural development of His disciples was nurtured to multiplication health...not violating the natural processes involved.

Jesus understood and worked this natural process. He did not force-feed the development of His disciples, nor did He try to short-circuit the processes. His fruit was real and natural. He understood the seasons of growth and worked the processes appropriately. He commanded His disciples to do the same and told them that if they abided in the vine (like He did) they too would increasingly bear 'fruit', 'more fruit' and even 'much fruit' (John 15). Again, this was a picture of natural and organic processes.

The process involved addressing viruses, nurturing the soil, creating a healthy environment, and being patient with the process. But it was a process...and one that could not be violated. God the Father was free to speed up the process through the miraculous, but He never violated natural processes. The fruit was not plastic...it was real. It yielded a true harvest of righteousness, a true movement of multiplication.

Following Jesus means we must follow the priorities and processes He established for us.

In a postmodern world that is suspicious of any processes or forced mechanical inventions, we must go beyond the mechanisms of the modern world and get back to the organic models Jesus created. Following Jesus means that we work with Him in the natural processes that He ordained, created, and abided by. Fruit bearing takes time and there are processes that must be followed.

5. The Holy Spirit Is Our Means

The word "means" is to be understood in the sense that the Holy Spirit is the source, the enabler in the process of disciplinmaking. It is the Holy Spirit who works through the lives of people who are committed to obedience to the Father's Will. Our lives are transformed as we open ourselves up to the role of the Holy Spirit in our lives. As we learn how to be filled with the Spirit, to walk in the Spirit, and to witness in the power of the Spirit we are transformed into the likeness of Christ. In this we will seek to live blamelessly before men.

The Holy Spirit brings a brokenness and repentance that transforms our ministries...usually beginning with our own confession of sin. It is supernatural and outside of our ability to control, manufacture, and/or create.

Jesus had just told His disciples that He was going to leave them (John 13:36). They would have to go through many troubles but were not to let their hearts be troubled (John 14:1). They were to follow His example...doing what He did... even doing greater things than He did (John 14:12). To all of this Jesus stated that it was good that He was going away (John 16:7), because then He would be giving them a gift (Acts 2:33) that He would pour out on them...the gift of the Holy Spirit.

In describing this "gift" in John 14:16 Jesus used a very unique and interesting word. He told them that He would send them "another Counselor". Jesus was already called the Wonderful Counselor (Isaiah 9:6). But the word "another" was the unique Greek word "allos" (rather than the common word "heteros"). It literally meant "another of the exact same kind". In other words, the Holy Spirit would be to the disciples (and to all future disciples), exactly what Jesus had been to them. The word for counselor was the word "parakaleo" literally meaning "comforter, protector, defender, helper, and counselor". Jesus had been all of these to his disciples and now the Holy Spirit would be another of the exact same kind.

The Holy Spirit is our God given means of "walking as Jesus walked" (1 John 2:6) and "doing what Jesus did" (John 14:12). This shouldn't surprise us because Jesus in His humanity leaned upon this same resource of the Holy Spirit. It was by the Holy Spirit that Jesus was:

- Conceived (Luke 1:35)
- Anointed (Luke 4:18, Acts 10:38, Is 11:1-2)
- Filled (Luke 4:1,14; John 3:34)
- Sealed (John 6:27)
- Led (Luke 4:1)
- Rejoiced (Luke 10:21)
- Performed miracles (Matthew 12:28, Luke 4:14-15,18)
- Raised from the dead (Hebrews 9:14, Romans 8:11)

In Acts 1:8 Jesus promised that the church would receive power when the Holy Spirit came. This promise was realised at Pentecost. Throughout the book of Acts we see evidence of the Spirit's enabling of the apostles and early believers. As a movement we desire to see the power and fullness of the Holy Spirit at work in the lives of individuals, and that as a result, lives and communities will be transformed for Christ.

Further, we believe that it is the Holy Spirit who works in and through the lives of people, and that it is through the Holy Spirit that the Body of Christ will be built up. We are committed to gifts-based ministry. By this we understand that the Holy Spirit has given each believer spiritual gifts that are to be used by each believer for the building up of the Body of Christ. We recognise that ministry is most effective when believers are operating in the area of their giftedness.

6. Fruit Is Our Measure

Over 55 times the term fruit is used in the Scriptures. Fruit is always a picture of multiplication and is linked to God's blessing. In Genesis we are told that "God blessed them"...and then said "be fruitful and multiply". (Genesis 1:28) God's blessing was connected to fruitfulness, and fruitfulness was linked to multiplication.

In John 13 Jesus knew that His time had come. He washed His disciples feet, predicts His betrayal, and then tells His disciples that He would be leaving them. In John 14 Jesus has a question and answer time with Thomas, Philip, and Judas. In John 14:31 Jesus said, "Come now, let us leave". In their commentary, Wescott/Hort believe that the rest of Jesus' discourse is conducted on His walk from the Upper Room to the Garden of Gethsemane. As Jesus passes through a vineyard He begins to talk to His disciples about His agenda for their lives. He begins to powerfully describe what He is going to bring about in their lives and His desires to see them bear "much fruit and so prove to be my disciples" (John 15:8). Jesus understood a process He graphically describes to His disciples.

It is a four step process...no fruit (vs. 2), fruit (vs. 2, 4), more fruit (vs. 2), and then much fruit (vs. 5, 8). Each step of the process had barriers, breakthrough points, and a proper response.

The first barrier is sin, which will yield no fruit. We see this in verse 1 when Jesus speaks of the vine 'in' the branch yet it yields no fruit. Being "in me", speaks of a relationship. A vine that has fallen off of the fence goes down in the mud; needs to be washed off, lifted back up into the sunlight, before it can bear fruit. So the barrier is sin, the breakthrough is cleansing and the response is repentance.

The second barrier is stuff. As a vine grows, often 10-12 branches will spring out of the vine. Without careful pruning by the gardener, all the sap from the vine will be consumed by the increasingly tangled web of branches. A good gardener carefully studies each individual plant, carefully prunes it back to 2-3 branches - allowing the sap to flow abundantly to these fewer branches and produce abundant rich grapes. But without the pruning the vine will eventually end up with a tangled web of multiple branches, little fruit, and eventually the death of the plant. So the barrier is stuff, the breakthrough is pruning and the response is rejoicing (James 1:2).

The third barrier is satisfaction. Being busy with the 'more fruit' we can become content with the increased harvest. Five times in this passage, Jesus speaks of abiding (meno is a rich Greek word meaning 'making Jesus our permanent dwelling place'). It is only through deep abiding that we are brought into that place of learning where we recognise what needs to take place for 'much fruit' to happen. So the barrier is satisfaction, the breakthrough is deep abiding, and the response is remaining.

It is clear that Jesus stated directly and powerfully that His agenda in their lives was to get them to the "much fruit" category. "By this is my Father glorified, that you bear much fruit and so prove to be my disciples" (John 15:8). There was no question in the disciples mind what Jesus' desires were. They understood the vineyard. They understood the role of the branches, the gardener, and the desired fruit. Jesus made it clear this was His agenda for their lives.

This was not something new for the disciples. They had watched Jesus speak to thousands, train seventy, recruit twelve, graduate eleven, and pour His life into three. They were slowly coming to understand that Jesus' mission was not to reach the world as much as it was to make disciples capable of reaching the world. Soon they would be launched out into Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria and the uttermost parts of the world. Within two years they would fill Jerusalem with His teaching (Acts 5:28), within four and one-half years they would have multiplying churches (Acts 9:38), within nineteen years they would turn the world upside down (Acts 17:6). Multiplication was God's DNA. Fruit was God's description of that multiplication.

The implications of this are numerous:

First, we can say with confidence that God's agenda in each of our lives is to mature us to the "much fruit" category. This will involve various seasons of life...both good and difficult...but He desires that we "bear much fruit and so prove to be His disciples" (John 15:8).

Secondly, we must without apology be fruit inspectors. When we appoint and select leaders to oversee ministries we must ask the tough questions of fruit bearing. Questions such as:

- Is fruit evident in this leader's life?
- Is it coming forth?
- Is it growing? If not...why not?
- Are we just about the talk...or are we about the walk?

As we ask these questions, we must keep in mind that in the scriptures, fruit is described as character (Gal 5:22-23), conduct (Romans 6:21-22, Phil 1:11) and converts (Romans 1:13).

Thirdly...it is God's desire to see a movement of multiplication out of the impact of our lives and ministry. Our dream is to see disciplinemaking movements expanded throughout the continent of Africa with movements of multiplication taking place among the youth of each country... this is not a pipe dream...it is God's passion.

7. The Gospel Is Our Message

Critical to the development of that next generation of leaders capable of becoming "fishers of men" (Matthew 4:19) is the clear biblical model in Jesus' life of helping His disciples learn to boldly proclaim the message of the Gospel.

While the clarity of the Gospel remains intact (Jesus died for our sins, was buried, and rose again 1 Cor. 15:3, Galatians 1:8-9), the challenge every generation faces is the courage and boldness needed to keep proclaiming that Gospel. All the pressures of the world, the flesh, and the devil are mobilized to hinder that proclamation.

There are three challenges that every generation must overcome to keep the Gospel central:

The first challenge is theological. Is the Gospel message clearly being presented? Does the next generation understand the content of the Gospel message...or has it been lost in the multiplicity of messages sent their way? Have we watered down the Gospel to be about just belief versus repentance? Are we giving the next generation intentional and multiple opportunities to be equipped in presenting that Gospel? (Philemon 6).

The second challenge is leadership. In Romans 10 speaks about six-step process...being sent...proclaiming... hearing... believing... calling out... being saved. Two of these steps directly rest in our hands... sending and proclaiming. Simply put, without going and without proclamation...the other steps cannot happen. Jesus clearly modeled this intentional development of the disciples in this proclamation process. On at least five different occasions, approximately every six months, you see Jesus taking His disciples on a ministry experience where the good news was proclaimed. (John 4 thru Samaria, Mark 1:39 throughout Galilee in the synagogues, Luke 8:1-3 throughout the cities and towns, Matthew 10 when the twelve are sent out two by two, Luke 10 with seventy-two being sent out). The last two events have Jesus very clearly sending His disciples...with only the last event in which Jesus did not participate. At the end of this process Jesus was "full of joy by the Holy Spirit" (Luke 10:21). He had strategically and intentionally developed His disciples to become fishers of men. His passion and focus was very intentional. His energy was very focused. His life modeled the clear priority of developing disciples capable of proclaiming the good news of that Gospel.

The third challenge is personal. Are we as leaders actively engaged in proclamation and leading our ministry in this bold and risky challenge? It is no accident that Paul often and repeatedly asked for prayers in being able to boldly proclaim the Gospel. (Ephesians 6:19-20, Colossians 4:4). Failure to get to proclamation in time has the effect of losing the clarity of the Gospel message. A generation that never proclaims the Gospel is the generation that loses the significance of that Gospel. As we are active in sharing our faith we come to a "full understanding of every good thing that we have in Christ Jesus" (Philemon 6 NIV). In today's culture of political correctness, personal truth, tolerance of one another's viewpoints; and constant emphasis upon belonging versus believing, sanctification versus justification, following versus repenting – we are in danger of moving away from the simplicity and power of boldly proclaiming the Gospel message (Romans 1:16).

The Greek word "euaggelizo" (evangelism), literally means the proclamation (declaring verbally) of the good news. While "outreach" is a process of cultivating and planting; 'evangelism' is an event meaning "to proclaim". Biblical evangelism hasn't occurred until proclamation happens.

We believe in asking tough questions about the end result of the evangelism and discipleship process. The end result of evangelism is measured by asking the question: Is the gospel being proclaimed clearly and concisely and to what extent? The end result of the discipleship process is measured by asking the question: Is peer-to-peer reproduction happening and are we developing fully trained fishers of men? Both of these questions are rooted in the concept of proclaiming the gospel message and calling others to do what Jesus did. Central to this whole process is the clarity and courage needed to boldly "proclaim" that Gospel message which is the "power of God unto salvation" (Romans 1:16).

The Gospel must remain our message, and as we seek to develop the next generation, the proclamation of that Gospel must remain at the core of our movement. Every generation must swim upstream in this resistance to proclamation. We need to be the warriors and champions that keep leading the new generation to become "fishers of men" not just "keepers of the aquarium".

8. The Church Is Our Medium

The church is God's chosen medium (vehicle) for fulfilling the Great Commission. The dictionary defines "Medium" as: (1) The means by which something is communicated. (2) The physical environment or conditions of growth, storage, or transport of a living organism. (3) An agency or means of doing something.

Jesus said, "I will build my church and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it" (Matthew 16:18). The local church is the visible expression of God's universal Church and it is the Bride of Christ. Jesus remains the Head of His Body...the church. The church is God's movement (Ephesians 3:10-11). We don't need to create a movement; we need to fuel God's existing movement of healthy local churches.

The mission of the church is discipling. The nature of the church is defined as a 'family, a priesthood, a community, a body'. These are all terms to describe the church's nature...with family being the number one term. However, we must not confuse the nature of the church with the mission of the church. Many have wrongly defined the mission of the church as that of being a family or a community...however that is not our mission... it is our nature. By functioning according to our nature...we will most successfully accomplish our mission. We must not confuse the two.

The question often unanswered is: What is the church?

Some would argue a gathering of believers is a church when it reaches a certain size (most denominations call a local gathering a 'mission station' until it can sustain itself at which point it becomes a 'church plant'...at 50 or 75 or 100 people).

Some would argue a local gathering of believers is a church when it has appointed leaders. Yet Paul said in Titus 1:5 to go back and do that which is unfinished and "appoint elders in every town". You can be a church without having elders appointed. It may take time to grow biblical leadership.

So when is a local gathering of believers a local church? What is the definition of a biblical church? If we are to fuel a movement of multiplication...then, it is imperative that we can define the local church.

We can simply define the local church as "two to three people gathered in His name for the express purpose of glorifying Him and fulfilling the Great Commission". This definition contains two elements. First is the size factor – but size is not the key factor. A local church, can be just two people, gathered in His name. The Lord's presence is what makes it a church. Secondly, it is purposeful...not just two Christians meeting for a bible study. Its purpose is the furtherance of the Great Commission.

With this definition, we then need to notice that the Great Commission is not to go and plant churches! The Great Commission is to make disciples...and then cluster them together into local churches...repeating the process locally. Our role as a movement in Africa is to fuel this movement of healthy churches, which are making disciples who can make disciples. We are not about working around the church or even being para-church. Our model is that of being pro-church and within the church. We are about movement building and that movement is about healthy gatherings of believers living and walking as Jesus walked.

In conclusion, our passion is to see that all ministry that we do takes place: In the church, for the church, with the church, and by the church.

9. Youth Are Our Mandate

James Stewart in his classic book the Life and Teaching of Jesus Christ, starts the book by saying, "Christianity began as a young people's movement. In thinking of Jesus and his disciples, that is the first fact to make quite clear. Unfortunately, it is a fact which Christian art and Christian preaching have too often obscured. But it is quite certain that the original disciple band was a young men's group. In this connection, notice how the apostle Paul, writing almost a generation later, reports that the five hundred to whom the risen Christ appeared, "the greater part remain unto this present" (1 Cor. 15:6). The natural inference is that the spiritual conquests of Jesus had been mainly among the younger people." (pp. 55-58)

He then goes on to argue that we'd be foolish if we do not devote all of our time, talent and treasures to mobilize the next generation for the cause of Christ.

We believe this! We know the truth of these statements. We know that the most strategic way to birth a long-term movement of multiplication is through mobilizing that next generation of young servant leaders. By doing so, like Jesus did, we ensure the long-term ongoing success of the movement.

Why is this so true? Why is it so strategic to focus on that "13-30 window" of potential young leaders. Let me suggest some reasons:

First, youth are the most moldable. They have little to unlearn and if developed early with the right DNA, they can become life-long reproducers.

Second, they are looking for a cause. In our postmodern world, it is still the great cause of God's metanarrative that will rally the next generation...despite what the skeptics may say. As they look for a cause to give their lives to they can be challenged to refocus their life calling and direction.

Third, they have universal tendencies. In our M-TV culture, they easily communicate across borders and nationalities and truly have become the first global youth culture.

Fourth, the scripture mandates the reaching of the next generation. Not only did Jesus focus on younger leaders, but Psalm 78:3-7 tells us to do the same.

Fifth, they are the most responsive to the gospel. Over 85 % of all of those who come to faith do so before their 20th birthday.

Sixth, the world is full of them. By 2020 over 50% of the globe will be under the age of 25. Over 60% of many nations are now under 20. They are a massive people group to be reached and mobilized.

Seventh, Jesus modeled this. Jesus by the model of His life invested in that young leader. He knew that the most strategic way long-term was through raising up that next generation of leaders who could leave a legacy of ministry impact.

10. Relationships are our Momentum

As we look at the discipling movement that Jesus modeled, we see that it was developed on the backbone of deep, meaningful relationships between Jesus and His disciples. Jesus spent intentional time with His disciples. As He spent time with them, He imparted His character and priorities to them. Throughout the Gospels we see Jesus and His disciples "doing life together". They lived together, ate together, ministered together - Jesus used every opportunity to build meaningful relationships with His disciples and to teach them about what it means to be a Christ-follower.

In the book of Acts we see how this pattern of building relationships continued. One of the pillars of the early church was the depth of relationship among believers - people who were prepared to sacrifice for one another; people who together were devoted to the apostles teaching, people who together were committed to the cause. Throughout the book of Acts it can be seen that the impetus and continuity of the movement was derived from relationships with one another.

In John 17:11, Jesus prays for the believers and He asks that they "may be one just as He and the Father are One". It is important to recognize that "being one" does not mean being identical, but that it means being united in common purpose. Believers can “be one” in purpose, while recognising uniqueness and celebrating the diversity found within the Body of Christ. This allows people to minister using their different talents, gifts and abilities, while achieving a common purpose.

As a movement, we believe in developing and maintaining meaningful relationships with the people we minister to and with. We believe that relationships are to be held above partnerships.

For the discipling movement to continue we need to recognise that the movement will derive its impetus, strength or continuity from meaningful relationships. We need to be intentional about developing meaningful relationships with the people that we are called to minister to.

11. Leading Servants is our Motto

Leading Servants is the motto of this movement. You will note that this is different to the familiar term: servant leadership. Sometimes the term “servant leadership” can be misunderstood and there is an unspoken thought that if someone leads, they are not serving. Sometimes there is also the unspoken sense that servant leadership implies that people who are servant leaders are to be “meek and mild” and their leadership gift is hampered in a way.

By Leading Servants we mean that we desire to see people using their God-given gift to lead. We desire to see people who lead – but who do this as Jesus did – humbly and with an attitude of “whoever is great must become least” – but who are released to LEAD!

In the Gospels we see that Jesus very clearly teaches His disciples that they are to be humble servants as they lead and minister to people. Jesus knew that the idea of leader as “loving servant of all” would not appeal to most people. Securing our own creature comforts is a much more common mission. But “servant” is His requirement for those who want to lead in His Kingdom.

The sharp contrast between our common ideas about leadership and the revolution Jesus announced is nowhere clearer than in Mark 10:42-43: “You know that those who are regarded as the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their high officials exercise authority over them. Not so with you. Instead, whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be slave of all.”

This was such a revolutionary idea that even those closest to Jesus, the disciples James and John, used their ambitious mother in a scheme to secure top positions in the coming kingdom before the other ten received their due. These two disciples took very seriously Jesus’ promise about sitting on glorious thrones and judging the tribes of Israel (Matt 19:28), but they misunderstood how to get there. Despite their friendship, Jesus did not give an inch to their campaign for office. “You don’t know what you are asking”, was His reply (Matt 20:22). James and John wanted the glory, but not the shame; the crown, but not the cross; the role of the master, but not servant.

Jesus’ teaching on servanthood and suffering was not intended merely to inspire good behaviour. Jesus wanted to impart the spirit of servanthood, the sense of personal commitment and identity that He expressed when He said, “I am among you as He who serves” (Luke 22:27). Mere acts of service could be performed with motives far from spiritual.

12. Kingdom Obedience is our distinctive Mark

As we look at the meaning of the word ‘kingdom’, we find that it denotes sovereignty, royal power, dominion, as well as the territory or people over whom a king rules. The Kingdom of God is the sphere of God’s rule, and He has not relinquished His sovereignty in the face of rebellion, but has declared His purpose to establish it. God calls all people to this Kingdom. He calls on all people everywhere, without distinction of race or nationality, to enter into this Kingdom, and to submit voluntarily to His rule.

According to the Synoptic Gospels, the kingdom of heaven or kingdom of God is the central theme of Jesus' preaching. John the Baptist first introduces the theme, and Jesus takes this message over from him. Jesus' proclamation of the kingdom follows on word for word on John's, yet it bears a much more comprehensive character.

As we look at the Synoptic Gospels, we see that the Kingdom of God has two sides - much like a single coin has two sides to it. The one aspect / side speaks about the 'here and now' (the present). This aspect of the Kingdom of God often highlights the suffering that is involved in the 'here and now' for those who enter into the kingdom. The second side / aspect speaks about the coming kingdom and the reward that is associated with it - the reward which exists for those who have been obedient to the kingdom in the 'here and now'.

Jesus teaches His followers many things about the kingdom. One of the things that we learn from His teaching is that entrance into the kingdom is by new birth only (Matt 18:3; John 3:5). Jesus makes it clear that nothing that a man may be by nature, and nothing that a man can attain to can bring him into the kingdom. It is only by the new birth through Jesus that this is possible.

We also learn from Jesus' teachings that a new nature is received through new birth. This new nature evidences itself through obedience and that only those who do the will of God shall enter into His kingdom. In Matt 7:21, Jesus says: "Not everyone who says to me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven, but only he who does the will of my Father who is in heaven." The heart of the kingdom of God is revealed in Romans 14:17 which says, "For the kingdom of God is not a matter of eating and drinking, but of righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, because anyone who serves Christ in this way is pleasing to God and approved by men."

Ultimately, those who belong to the kingdom are those who seek above all things to be obedient to kingdom principles; those who lay aside personal desires and needs in order to usher in the new kingdom. In Matt 6:33, Jesus says, "But seek first his kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things will be given to you as well" and in Luke 18:29 Jesus says, "I tell you the truth," Jesus said to them, "no one who has left home or brothers or parents or children for the sake of the kingdom of God will fail to receive many times as much in this age, and in the age to come, eternal life."

Finally, from the above paragraphs we can deduce that those who belong to the kingdom are those in whose life the kingdom takes visible form, the light of the world, the salt of the earth; those who have taken on themselves the yoke of the kingdom, who live by their King's commandments and learn from Him. As a movement, we hold at the core a desire to be mastered by obedience to the Kingdom - in order to show others His love, and to ultimately bring glory to His Name through the ushering in of the coming Kingdom!
